RID OF BLACKBIRDSBlackbirds are so numerous in many of our Kentucky towns as to be a nuisance. There has been much discussion as to ways and means of driving them out. We do not guarantee that it will work, but here is a recipe suggested by a correspondent of that wide-awake agricultural paper, the Country Gentleman:"Three years ago I discovered a method of driving the blackbirds away from my trees that has been effective and has been every year since. After trimming the limbs from the shade trees, I painted the cut parts with pine tar. I noticed that the birds left in a very short time after flying into the trees that day, and on the second evening they came and went almost immediately.
They did not return for about three weeks, when I again painted part of the trees with pine tar. After the first evening the birds did not return to the trees during the entire summer. Pine tar seems to do the trick."This at least seems to be worth trying by those who are desirous of banishing blackbirds from their premises.—Frankfort State Journal.

follows:"The nation rejoices in a big wheat crop. Nine hundred million bushels is a wonderful yield, and it will do the world good. It will do the farmers much good too. It will tend to make living easier for the people in the cities. It will give us what amounts to almost an assurance against financial troubles. Its value is not like an increase in the value of Comb Your Cow If She Kicks.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside a number of contributors give their experiences with kicking cows and tell how to break them of the habit. One contributor's cure is described as follows: "I once had a heifer that kicked like lightning, so to speak. The only way we could milk her was by tying her. One day my father-in-law came, and we told him about the heifer. After a little he said, 'Come to the barn and we'll milk her.' 'He took a card used for combing the cows and, gently stroking her, said, 'You milk
now.' I sat down and milked her.
She didn't lift a foot. For nearly three weeks someone combed the cow while I milked. She now stands without combing. To us the cure was remarkable."

Ask Yourself
These Questions

Be Honest in Answering Them

Can I afford not to take advantage of the opportunity offered by the watch sale of the Forbes Jewelry Store?Can I afford to be without a watch at the prices at which the Forbes Jew-wear a nice watch that I will always be proud of, and a watch which can be relied upon as an efficient time piece?Is it really good taste for me to wear a dollar watch with a thirty or forty dollar suit of clothes? When good watches are being sold so cheap why shouldn't I buy one that will last a lifetime?Ask yourself these questions and the natural conclusion will be: I can

TOOK POSSESSION OF HOUSE

Crowning Eccentricity of Englishwoman's Life, That Was Filled With Eccentricities.

In an old book published in Paris under the title of "Le Journal d'un Voyage au Levant," there is an amusing account of the way in which Lady Lester Lucy Stanhope, the eccentric English traveler, took possession of a house at Djoun, where eventually she made her permanent home.

She was pleased with the house and its surrounding gardens, and accepted an invitation to dinner. As she sat after dinner, with the owner, a Christian merchant, he said to her that if she liked the place, he should be glad if he would stay the night. When she said that she liked it so much that she would stay there the rest of her days, he took it as a polite figure of speech; but a fortnight later, as she still prolonged her visit, he suggested that Europe might be expecting her return.

"I do not intend to return," she replied, carelessly.

"Ah, then you intend to build a palace in the neighborhood?" said he.

"No, this house suits me very well."

"But I cannot let it or sell it, madam."

"I do not wish to hire it or buy it, but I intend to keep it," was the startling reply.

In this dilemma the merchant dispatched a messenger posthaste to Emir Beshyr, who sent word to Lady Hester that she must give up the house. Lady Hester, however, wrote to Constantinople, whence a courier came to the emir, bearing the order, "Obey the princess of Europe in everything."

So the disgusted merchant fled, leaving her ladyship in possession. There for 20 years she lived the life of a recluse, growing more and more withdrawn from the world, and more accustomed to dwell in a mental and spiritual realm of her own creation, until she died, and was buried in the garden of the house that she had usurped.

SUCCESS MUST BE EARNED

Earnest, Intelligent Effort, With Industry, Will Set One Well on the Path to the Goal.

Most men who have amounted to anything started with nothing but ability and determination—a combination which recognizes no man-made limitations.

Any kind of work is better than idleness, which is directly responsible for most of the unhappiness in this world. Idleness is a dangerous thug; it may grow into a habit that might stick to you after you get back in harness, and the man who loafs on his job is only fooling himself.

Eternal, intelligent effort is the price of commercial growth, and where there is no progression there is bound to be retrogression. Business is something like aeroplanning; to stop is to drop and to drop is generally to bust.

Pin your faith to the law of compensation, but don't take any stock in the law of chance; there's no such thing. Waiting for something to turn up in the belief that things are bound to come your way eventually is throwing dice with fate. Many a good dog never got a decent bone until his teeth were gone.

Troublesome Gender.

The trouble that Latin gender gives to American boys and girls who are struggling with the rudiments of that tongue should inspire in them a sympathetic feeling for a small descendant of the race of Attila who found the gender of our English nouns and pronouns a stumbling block.

A solid little figure trudged up to the librarian in the children's room. "That little boy," he declared, indicating the rest of the room vaguely with his thumb, "he hit me."

The "liberry teacher" followed him back across the room until the accusing thumb halted near a table where sat a gully-looking child about half the size of the plaintiff.

The accuser explained: "That little boy, she hit me. That little boy is a little girl; but he has short hair, and when I point at him, she hits me." —Youth's Companion.

How Customs Change.

If some of the notables of ancient times were living now how differently they would act!

Noah would charter an ocean liner. Nero would step into the parlor and turn on the phonograph while Rome burned and the heathen raged. Ben Hur would pilot a 60 horse-power racing car and spin around saucer tracks. Jason would hire the great detective to find the Golden Fleece, instead of going after it himself. Icarus would mount to the sun in a biplane without fear of its wings melting off. Napoleon would invade Russia in a Pullman palace car. Demosthenes would go on the Chautauqua circuit. Cain would plead circumstantial evidence, self-defense and emotional insanity.

Discoverer of the Pacific.

The discoverer of the Pacific ocean was Vasco Nunez de Balboa. On the early morning of the 25th of September, 1513, Balboa, and a small party of men, made their laborious way up the densely covered face of a steep ridge from the summit of which they were rewarded with the vision of the great "South sea" which, up to that time, had never been seen by the eye of a white man.

JOKERS HAD THEIR INNINGS

Telephone Prank That Left English Office Man Decidedly Not in the Best of Humor.

Before the eyes of a leading London stock broker there appeared for a few brief moments visions of fortune, fame and honor. He was sitting in his office when the telephone bell rang.

"Hello," he answered.

"Oh, that is Mr. Blank, is it not? Why do you smoke your cigars through a holder?"

In some astonishment the broker put his cigar down.

"No, no, do not put it down, and if you do, find an ash tray for it."

This was so uncanny he shifted his chair slightly from the instrument.

"Do not move away," continued the voice, "and do not tug so impatiently at your mustache."

Down went his hand.

"Who on earth are you?" shouted the broker, "and how do you know what I am doing with my cigar and hand? You talk as if you could see me."

An amazing reply came:

"I can see you. There you are, twitching your tie straight. As a matter of fact, I have invented an instrument which enables you to see over a telephone wire, and I am talking to you because I cannot finance the idea myself and want you to float it on half shares."

The possibilities of the scheme were immense. The broker, for an instant, saw himself dealing in vast orders for government departments. He saw big orders for foreign rights. It was one of the miracles of modern science. The capitalist would make a fortune, and—then he glanced out of the window across the street.

Beaming down at him from a window, overlooking his office, was a row of grinning faces, among which he recognized two or three fellow-members of the house.

He slammed down the receiver. The rosy visions faded away, and sadly he drew back out of sight.

Ancient Breakfast Foods.

We moderns look on breakfast foods as of the blessings, or curses, of civilization. It is always easy to divide man into two classes according to his way of thinking about breakfast foods. He belongs either to the class that thinks the Scotch produced such men as Burns and Sir Walter Scott because of or in spite of their fondness for oatmeal. Those who belong to the "in-spite-of" class think that breakfast foods aid and abet softening teeth, anemia, poor digestion and nervousness. The "because-of" class looks on breakfast foods as the mainstay of life.

Whatever we think of breakfast foods most of us think them a modern characteristic. They are not.

In the Canary Islands ever since fourteen hundred and something, the natives have eaten a breakfast food called gollo, which is made from wheat and barley. In times when the wheat or barley crop has failed they have used other edible grains in the preparation of this food, so they have had plenty of variety.

Iron Ore for 200 Years.

There is still a considerable amount of iron ore in the ground, as shown by a report on the world's resources presented at the International Geological congress at Stockholm. It was estimated that the total actual supply of iron ore existing in deposits that can be worked at an economic profit amounts to 22,408,000,000 long tons, representing 10,192,000,000 tons of iron.

This total would supply the requirements of the world for considerably less than two centuries, even were the present rate of output not exceeded on the average. However, the potential resources of the world not yet developed are estimated to amount to 123,377,000,000 tons of ore. The output of iron ore in 1912 is estimated at 146,000,000 tons for the ten principal countries.

Around the Old Drum Stove.

"Ever see any big snowstorm when you was young, Uncle Cy?" said the wlt behind the counter.

"Sure, I did," chuckled the old man.

"I seen some whoppers. I remember one where th' snow wuz six feet above my head. Yessir."

"Oh, nonsense, Uncle Cy. That's impossible. There never was such a snow."

"It's true, I tell ye."

"It couldn't have been."

"Yes, 'twas. Six feet above my head. I guess I ought to know. I wuz down cellar at th' time!"

London Times at a Penny.

On the first day that the London Times was issued at a penny (two cents), its circulation was quadrupled. Three hundred thousand copies were sold. The London Daily Mail says: "The demand is the most amazing thing that has ever been known in the history of newspapers. Four or five hundred thousand people applied for the paper in vain. On arrival at their newsagent's or bookstalls they found that all the copies had been reserved for regular purchasers."

Seaplane Lifeboats.

The British admiralty has decided that all seaplanes used by naval armen shall carry a miniature lifeboat suspended underneath the body of the machine. The boats are to be built of cedar, equipped with two oars, a mast, and sail, and weigh only 30 pounds.

Lincoln On Prohibition

"Prohibition will work great injury to the cause of temperance. It is a species of intemperance within itself, for it goes beyond the bounds of reason in that it attempts to control a man's appetite by legislation, and in making crimes out of things that are not crimes. A prohibition law strikes a blow at the very principles on which our government was founded. I have always been found laboring to protect the weaker classes from the stronger, and I can never give my consent to such a law as you propose to enact. Until my tongue shall be silenced in death I will continue to fight for the rights of man."

A WORD TO THE FARMERS OF CHRISTIAN COUNTY.

The soil in Christian County is noted for producing the best grades of dark tobacco, which it yields in abundant crops.

This advantage has increased the value of farm lands upwards of one hundred per cent during the last ten years.

The 14,000 acres in tobacco culture in Christian County now produces an annual crop which is valued at $754,755.80.

Leading authorities have proven by experiments that tobacco culture nets the farmer the greatest income per acre.

The Virginia Prohibitionists have served notice on the tobacco interests that after they wipe out the saloons and the liquor traffic they will wipe out, what they call, the "tobacco evil."

What applies to Virginia as a tobacco manufacturing center ought to apply to Kentucky as a tobacco producing center. Some of the leading reformers in Kentucky have already declared, that after they succeed in wiping out saloons, they will go after the legislature for laws that will prohibit the sale of tobacco in any form.

This will eventually wipe out a market for the enormous tobacco product of the farmers of Christian County and our farmers will be forced to raise other and less profitable crops.

Can the farmers get the same return from their labor and investment if they are forced to quit tobacco culture and raise other crops?

Leading authorities on farming say they cannot.

Can the farmer who has bought his farm on time payments, intending to pay it off on his returns from tobacco, meet his obligations if he is forced to go into less profitable farming?

Will this uncalculated hardship which the reformer intends to saddle on the farmer not have a tendency to discourage farming and depreciate the value of farm lands in Kentucky and Christian County?

The reformers are now asking the farmers to help destroy the liquor traffic in Christian County and turn the tide of business from Hopkinsville elsewhere.

If they succeed they will next call on the voters of Christian County to help prohibit the sale of tobacco and destroy a market for our principle product.

Can our farmers afford to help the reformers destroy a business which now pays a big per cent of the taxes of Christian County and assume the additional burden of taxation for themselves?

After the liquor traffic is destroyed, they will go after tobacco, after tobacco, what next?

"A word to the wise" ought to be sufficient.

BURGLARS AT PEMBROKE

Levy & Whitlow's Store Broken Open Second Time.

Levy & Whitlow's store at Pembroke was again entered by burglars Tuesday night. They secured $2 from the cash drawer and a lot of cigars and other articles in the store, including a watermelon which was eaten before they left. Several holes were bored in the rear door of another store house but the burglars failed to effect an entrance to this building. This is the second time Levy & Whitlow's store has been entered by thieves within the past few days.

FISCAL COURT PROCEEDINGS

Regular Monthly Meeting Held Here on Tuesday.

Fiscal court met Tuesday in regular monthly session.

The contract entered into May 23 with John M. Major and others to build a pike from Edwards' Mill toward Pembroke was approved and the sum of $3,000 was appropriated for the purpose, payable $1,000 from the 1914 revenue, $1,000 from the revenue of 1915 and $1,000 from the 1916 revenue. Mr. Major and others have paid $1,880.

On the petition of E. R. Tandy and others to build a gravel road on the Tobacco road it was ordered that said road be built and a committee was appointed to contract for said work.

Henry Henderson was given the contract for the construction of one half mile of pike on the Johnson's Mill road.

The road engineer was authorized to have the turnpike on the Lafayette road finished.

Miscellaneous claims amounting to about $700 were paid.

Battle Of The Nile.

No doubt there are very few who know that these lines of Mrs. Hemans:

"The boy stood on the burning deck,
Whence all but him had fled;
The flames that lit the battle's wreck Shone round him o'er the dead."
refer to any specific battle, but according to the Courier-Journal they do. That paper is responsible for the following:

"They refer to the battle of the Nile, also known as the battle of Aboukir, because fought in the bay of that name, near one of the mouths of the Nile, Egypt. This desperate naval battle was fought on August 17, 1797, between the British fleet commanded by Admiral Nelson and the French fleet under Admiral Bruceys. The French were badly defeated, nine of their ships were captured, two were destroyed and two escaped. The incident commemorated in Mrs. Hemans' poem is thus related: Young Casabianca, a boy about 13 years old, son of the French admiral, remained at his post after the ship L'Orient, the admiral's flagship had, taken fire and all the guns had been abandoned, and he perished in the explosion of the vessel when the flames had reached the powder."

Lime's First Use.

The use of lime as binding material for mortar originated in the remote past. It is probable that some savages when using limestone rocks to confine their fire noticed that the stones were changed by the action of the heat. A passing shower may have slaked the lime to a paste, and they discovered that the paste was a better material than clay to fill the crevices in their crude dwellings. From this discovery it was but a step to add sand to the paste in order to produce a mortar.—U. S. Geological Survey.

Faith in Lightning Rods

Is Again Reviving.

According to Farm and Fireside, the national farm paper published at Springfield, Ohio, lightning rods are of great value to farmers, despite the fact that a wave of disbelief in them swept over the country a few years ago owing to swindles perpetrated by lightning-rod agents who charged exorbitant prices for their wares and otherwise defrauded people. In the current issue of this farm paper appears an article on the subject of an interesting extract from which follows:

"There's no doubt but that buildings properly rodded with good copper rods are practically immune from serious damage by lightning. Of course the rods must be kept in good repair. Once in a while we hear of a rodded building being slightly injured, but I have never known a building being destroyed by lightning if properly rodded with pure copper cable lightning rods. On the other hand, so many unrodded buildings are destroyed that I consider it hazardous for any farmer owning valuable buildings to let them go unrodded. The ghastly leaping flames from an unrodded barn that was struck and burned to the ground in my neighborhood last season still form a vivid picture in my mind. For a time the lightning-rod theory was considered as a sort of bogus proposition, due mostly to business done by fake lightning-rod agents years ago. This idea is now rapidly dying out.

"To be sure, agents sometimes charge exorbitant prices, but if you wish to protect your buildings from lightning you can do so at a moderate cost, besides having a first-class job done. Buy the material and do the rodding yourself, or have someone do it under your direction. One thousand feet of cable and 24 tops can be purchased at wholesale prices which are very reasonable. If this amount of material is more than one man needs, two or three parties can order together at wholesale rates."

ANIMALS AND BIRDS AS

WEATHER FORECASTERS

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside appears a half-page entitled "Weather Wisdom for Ready Reference," in which a contributor tells in part as follows how animals and birds foretell weather conditions:

"The spider, upon the approach of rainy or windy weather, will be found to shorten and strengthen the guys of his web. When the storm is over he will lengthen them again."

"Sea gulls predict storms by assembling on the land, but this is merely a search for food. They instinctively know that the rain will bring the earthworms and larva to the surface. A similar instinct teaches the swallow to fly high in fair weather and skim the ground when foul weather is coming. They simply follow the flies and gnats which remain in the warm air."

"Swine will carry hay and straw to a hiding place, oxen will lick themselves the wrong way of the hair, sheep will bleat and skip about, hogs turned out in the woods will come to their pens squealing and grunting, colts will rub their backs against the ground, crows will gather in flocks, crickets will sing more loudly, frogs will croak and change color to a dingy hue, dogs will eat grass, and rooks soar like hawks."

"In all probability these many actions are due to an uneasiness similar to that which all who are troubled with corns or rheumatism experience just previous to a storm, and are caused both by the variation in barometric pressure and the changes in the electrical condition of the atmosphere."

BUILDER OF DREAMS

By GEORGE ELMER COBB.

"He has brought a new motive into my life—he is the best man I ever knew!" spoke Lesbia Austin with force and sincerity.

"H'm!", commented her guardian and distant relative, Ira Dunn. He had his own ideas about Clement Rowe, the artist friend to whom Lesbia referred. A selfish, sordid being, he as well had some plans and prospects regarding Lesbia, and he did not intend that they should be set astray.

There had come a month of new glory in the life of the sweet, bright girl who had led a lonely humdrum existence at the home of the crusty old lawyer for ten years. Clement Rowe, an artist, had strolled to Merton. He had met Lesbia and had stayed. Her guardian was absent on an important law case in a distant city and Lesbia had a free hand.

She took pleasure in guiding her new acquaintance to the most picturesque spots in the vicinity. She posed for him. She betrayed the ardent art impulse in her own nature, and under his loving, skilful guidance she had soon mastered the rudiments of drawing and painting.

Her eyes sparkled, her breath came quick, her ambition and anticipation showed in her bonny face as he told her of studio life in the city. She was a rare builder of dreams. Her father had been a noted tragedian. Perhaps there was born in her the careless, happy bohemian instinct. At least, the artist's stories of genius striving in an attic, of grand though humble souls, pure, loyal, worthy amid poverty and disappointment, appealed to her.

"To be among them and among pictures—pictures—pictures!" she had fluttered with eloquent eyes—"It is life, the higher life!"

It seemed as though the sun had departed from the heavens the day that Clement Rowe left Merton. He had promised to return the next month. There came a chatty, friendly letter from Clement. It was full of his art, full of himself, therefore she cherished it, and the simple but pretty missive she sent in reply seemed to bring back to his longing soul a solacing memory of ramblings in the sweet scented woods, the flitting of a face that was impressed upon his heart of hearts like a talisman.

Then weeks of gloom, for Lesbia received no reply. Neither did Clement Rowe return as he had promised. Poor little spirit! She grieved to think she was so soon forgotten. Then a wonderful happening took up her attention. An aunt had died leaving her twenty-five thousand dollars.

It was all in money, Ira Dunn told her, and he developed a sudden new interest in his charge. He had anticipated the bequest for a year back, but he had never told Lesbia of that.

Now Ira Dunn conceived a great idea of keeping that money in the family. He had a favorite nephew in a neighboring town. Behold, within a brief time, this Ahner Bowen a guest at the Dunn homestead, the chosen suitor for the hand of the pretty little heiress!

Lesbia treated the awkward, carrot-haired youth with kindness, as her gentle nature impelled her. It hurt her, however, when boating or driving her surroundings would suggest those rich, joyful days when Clement Rowe had been by her side. The contrast of companionship was so intense that she would turn aside to hide the tears of regret—of pride, too, for Lesbia felt that Clement had unwarrantably slighted her.

One day Ahner Bowen blunderingly proposed to Lesbia. So palpably had the speech he made been put into his mouth by Ira Dunn that Lesbia laughed outright at him. In a later spirited interview with Mr. Dunn she flatly rejected his candidate and the schemer set about forming new plots.

Then gradually there came to Lesbia's mind an intense desire to make of her life an endeavor. She made of her room a regular studio. There was some joy in getting into a groove of work that was harmonious, but she missed the expert hand that had taught her the rudiments of a profession she was resolute to adopt as a life mission.

And then one day came a remark able discovery, that abruptly changed all the impulses of her young life and hurried the accomplishment of her soul's ambitions.

She was looking for an old scrap book in the library when she came across what appeared to be the pencilled draft of a letter written by Mr. Dunn. She could not take her eyes from the sheet, as she saw that it concerned Clement Rowe.

It had apparently been written right after Lesbia had answered the first and only missive she had received from the artist. It told Lesbia that Clement had written a manly letter to Mr. Dunn, confessing his love for her and asking his permission to renew the acquaintance.

The reply had been that Lesbia was already selected for another, that she would ultimately become an heiress, and that if Clement persisted in his attentions he would lie under the suspicion of being a mere fortune hunter.

"Poor, proud soul!" cried Lesbia, her eyes scintillating with indignation, mingled with reverence for the man she had learned to esteem. "And he has loved me all the time! Oh, the way is easy now! As to the fortune—"

Her busy little mind mapped out and carried out a speedy program. Money should cease to be a barrier between Clement and herself, she resolved.

The next morning Lesbia went alone to the bank where her little fortune was deposited. First she drew out a few hundred dollars for her own personal use. Next, she sent half of the remainder to an old aunt who had groined under the hard burden of a heavy mortgage on her home for many years. The balance Lesbia donated to a home for orphans in a near city.

"He can be no fortune hunter now!" she whispered raptly to herself—"If he really wants me."

A note apprised Ira Dunn of what his independent charge had done the next day, and Lesbia was on her way to the city, and first thing to the artist quarter of the big metropolis.

One day Clement Rowe received a note from a Mrs. Ernest Moore. She was the widow of an artist, and an artist herself. As he entered her studio he chanced to glance past the draperies at an aproned figure standing busy at work before an easel.

"Miss Austin!" he fairly gasped, "and here!"

"Yes, for a month past she has been my helper," replied Mrs. Moore, with a happy smile. "She is making good headway towards a point where she can earn her living."

"What! she, an heiress?" challenged Clement incredulously.

"Let me tell you a story," said the lady artist—and she did.

"Now, then, Mr. Rowe," she remarked brightly, "I am going to leave you alone to renew your acquaintance with the wildwood nymph you mourned as lost."

Blessed fate! The sunlight was bright in that quiet studio, two dauntless spirits met on the threshold of a blissful destiny. The harrier of fortune was gone, and they could work and love together in the pure simple glory of perfect harmony of mind and soul.

Cat in a Maze.

More uncomfortable than a "cat in a strange garret" must be a cat in a "crystal maze"—a labyrinth of paths, lined with mirrors, and once in, it is hard to find one's way out. In a town where one of these mazes was being exhibited a strange cat strayed in, and soon became highly interested.

Walking around between the mirrors she saw her reflection on all sides, and she did not appear well pleased. Her tail began to swell, and she rushed at the nearest cat, which, of course, advanced to meet her at the same rate of speed. With a shriek of defiance they met and the lithe-tempered feline fell back from a fearful bump against a mirror. Up she jumped and looked around, only to see an array of angry cats staring at her. When she moved all the other cats moved also. With a bowl of dismay she turned and fled. Groups of cats greeted her everywhere as she rushed into mirrors and tried to climb the slippery surface of the glass.

When she came to the exit she shot out from the maze as if thrown from a catapult. With two jumps she rushed into the street, and disappeared in one of the adjacent houses, probably as scared a cat as ever was born.

The Connoisseur.

Every Riviera visitor knew Sebastian B. Schlesienger, the rich American composer and connoisseur. Mr. Schlesienger, at the end of the Riviera season, gave a dinner at his beautiful flat on the Promenade des Anglais in Nice, and showed his superb collections, and at the same time gave a whimsical definition of a connoisseur. "A connoisseur," he said, while pointing out the beauties of his old stained-glass windows—"a connoisseur is but too often a wealthy individual who pays more for a second-hand article than he'd have to give for a new one."

The Honest Purpose.

Work of any sort is a training. The habit of concentration helps to give power and decision. Success is never won by a careless, slipshod, slovenly way of working, but by a patient, persistent, faithful habit of attention to detail, and in the conscientious fulfillment of a task, large or small, and whether it is liked or not. The honest purpose should be to do it well, although it may neither be observed nor praised. Whatever our daily work the discipline of it teaches us self-restraint, obedience to law and guides us to a well-ordered life.

Two Pictures of a Town.

By Leigh Mitchell Hodges—in Philadelphia North America.

On my way down town the other day I met a man who knows I'm from Missouri.

"Wasn't your home in Carthage?" he asked.

I told him it was—and still is, for always it's home where your folks live.

"I see Carthage has just stepped back into the saloon ranks," he said. "What sort of place is it, anyhow?"

"Well," said I, "it's one of the prettiest little cities in the land, and its chief beauty is a lot of fine old forest trees, mostly oaks. I tell you they're proud of them, too! Why, if someone were to come along with plans for a new factory whose smoke fumes might hurt those trees, he'd be turned down instantly!"

"He might give work to a hundred persons and add thousands a year to the trade of the place, but that would make no difference. Those people love their trees and they'd fight for them."

"They've got unusual streets, too. Nature macadamized them and tilted them to drain quick. Twenty minutes after a downpour you can cross anywhere without spoiling your shine."

"They think so much of those streets that if someone came along with a proposition for a big business whose output would have to be hauled in cog-wheeled drays that would tear up some of them, no loyal Carthaginian would consider it, altho it might add $500 a week to the local payroll."

"You see, they have the right idea about such things. They make for good home surroundings, and Carthage has more fine homes than any place you ever saw. Many of these are built of marble quarried right there which is getting famous, so their pride is justified. And it's some pride!"

"If a scoundrel should sneak around some dark night slashing crude oil or tar on the walls of those homes, they'd tar and oil him! And if he tried to defend himself by a claim that repairing the damage would give work to a lot of people and put more money in circulation, he might get to the insane asylum, but I think he'd take a little tar along with him, even at that! Homes means something to those folks."

"Yet they voted saloons in again!" said the man.

"Yes, but if ever you get to that part of the country, run over to Carthage just to see their schools. Why, the high school is a regular marble palace, and everyone takes a real personal interest in the whole system. They're so keen about their children that if any teacher should say 'damn,' he'd be fired before recess."

"And Carthage has more clubs than any other town of its size,—worth-while ones. Their three Shakespeare clubs would be a credit to any city."

"Once a newcomer happened to say she thought the place was 'nutty over clubs.' She didn't mean to sneer, but for a good while after this got around she was treated badly. Then she learned what was the matter and apologized to some of the clubwomen."

"Of course, we knew you spoke carelessly," said one of them, "but when you've lived here longer, you'll see that we put a high value on everything that makes for better living and higher thinking."

"And they voted the saloons in?" said the man.

"Yes, but you ought to see the fine churches out there! They're prosperous, too. Those folks aren't the kind to cut church when it snows or blows. They've got an eye for the economic side of religion, too, as well as a sense of its spiritual worth."

"If you'd care to see it, I'll send over a little book of views that'll give you some idea of what the place is like."

"No thank you," said the man. "You've told me so much that I've already formed a fairly accurate picture."

"I take it that Carthage is a place where most folks care more for trees than for young men, else they wouldn't call back an 'industry' whose poison fumes sear lives rather than leaves."

"Evidently most of those Carthaginians are more concerned about streets than minds and bodies, or they'd stand out against this 'industry' that keeps scores of workers and thinkers torn up, and subtracts many times $500 a week from the local payroll."

"As for their handsome houses, I'd like more of a place where they'd pity a degenerate who soiled the outside of their homes, saving the tar and temper for those who strike at the families that make these homes and damage them so far beyond repair that no claim can be made about giving extra employment or putting more money in circulation."

"I think I've got a fair mental photograph of the town that would fire a school teacher for saying 'damn,' yet opens the door to places that turn out daily crops of cussers whose vile oaths, spouted without regard for women or children, make a plain 'damn' look like a number twenty-four homophatic pill in the presence of a fourteen-inch shell."

"Those clubs form a nice background, but that speech you quoted is about as impressive as a second-hand toothpick sticking out of a sand wave in the center of Sahara when coupled with the news that Carthage has welcomed back the one worst enemy of 'better living and higher thinking.'"

"No you needn't bother to send me any picture. I've got one. And if I should want to frame it, I'd make a mental moulding of these fine churches whose members consider the economic side of religion in a community where the most uneconomic thing on earth—the only thing that asks pay for something that is less than nothing—is invited back on condition that it won't try to compete with the preachers by keeping open Sundays!"

"Yes, I've got a picture of Carthage. But if a majority of her people knew how many others have copies like mine, they'd order the plate destroyed and arrange for another sitting."

Not one disinterested and unashamed friend in a whole great county to defend over his own name the saloon. The county is to be congratulated. But what a withering commentary on the saloon.

Check your fall cough or cold at once—don't wait—it may lead to serious lung trouble, weaken your vitality and develop a chronic lung ailment. Get a bottle of Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey to-day; it is pure and harmless—use it freely for that fall cough or cold. If Baby or Children are sick give it to them, it will relieve quickly and permanently. It soothes the irritated throat, lungs and air passages. Loosens phlegm, is antiseptic and fortifies the system against colds. It surely prevents cold germs from getting a hold. Guaranteed. Only 25c at your druggist.—Advertisement.

Physical Culture in Old Egypt.

That physical culture was a fact with the fashionable ladies of the courts of the Pharaohs is another phase of Egyptian life revealed by the rock pictures of the "Mother of Civilization." The more we moderns dig into the buried past of the Pharaohs the more moderate grows the estimation of our wonderful progress.

Rheumatism Pains Stopped.

The first application of Sloan's Liniment goes right to the painful part—it penetrates without rubbing—it stops the Rheumatic Pains around the joints and gives relief and comfort. Don't suffer! Get a bottle to-day! It is a family medicine for all pains, hurts, bruises, cuts, sore throat, neuralgia and chest pains. Prevents infection. Mr. Chas. H. Wentworth, California, writes:—"It did wonders for my Rheumatism, pain is gone as soon as I apply it. I recommended it to my friends as the best Liniment I ever used." Guaranteed. 25c at your Druggist. Advertisement.

Quite Reasonable.

"So you don't call on Miss Buto any more. Quarreled?" "Well, I told her I preferred to have her kiss me before and not after she kissed her pet dog." "And what did she say?" "She said I evidently forgot that the dog might have his preference, too."—Boston Transcript.

Paducah, Oct. 6-4 days.
Murray, Oct. 7-3 days.

Soldier's Most Trying Position.

The average soldier finds the most terrifying position to be that of standing motionless in the front rank, exposed to the enemy's fire without being able to reply. The order to advance or to charge with fixed bayonets is then received as a release from agony. Movement, even into greater peril, distracts the mind and greatly reduces the mental anguish.

Cures Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure

Effect of One Bottle.

Grardall, Tex.—After my last spell of sickness," writes Mrs. Belle Teal, of this city, "I remained very ill, and stayed in bed for eight weeks. I couldn't get up, all this time, and though my doctor came to see me every day, he didn't do me any good. I had taken but one bottle of Cardui, when I was up, going everywhere, and soon I was doing all my housework." Cardui helps when other medicine have failed, because it contains ingredients not found in any other medicine. Pure, safe, reliable, gentle—Cardui is the ideal medicinal tonic for weak, sick women. Try it.—Advertisement.

Chance for Grannie.

A little English boy wrote to his grandmother from his boarding school, in time for her birthday. The letter ran thus: "Dear Grannie: I want to send you a birthday present, but I haven't any money. So if you will send me the money you always give me for Christmas now, I'll buy you something nice with it. I'm thinking of a pair of pistols a boy here will sell cheap or a gramophone that another boy has. I could use them until I come home."

How To Give Quinine To Children.

FEBRILINE is the trade-mark name given to an Improved Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for 2 ounce original package. The name FEBRILINE is blown in bottle. 25 cents.

FEELS FOR WOES OF OTHERS

Man of Brotherly Instinct Is Not Prepared to Admit, However, That He Is a Pessimist.

It is constantly said to me: Count your blessings! Look on the bright side; you are not blind or a cripple;
you have your speech and memory.
On cold days you have warm clothes,
the loaf is on the table and the fire is burning on the hearth. And the material prosperity will continue tomorrow and probably through all the tomorrows of your mortal life. And then there are the dear ones and the friends who love you.

This is all true; but stepping on the porch for a minute, I see a poor old horse standing hitched to a laundry sleigh. He is shivering and un-blanketed. At this moment there comes a little boy, not too warmly clad, who wants me to buy a loaf of brown bread. His mother is a widow and does "home-baking" and tries in this way to keep her family together.
And then I have learned that even in this so-called prosperous city there are a large number of people out of work who rely upon their daily wages to keep the loaf on the table.

Now if the shadow falls across my heart, am I a pessimist? Does it make my loaf taste sweeter that my neighbor has none? Can I be thankful for my breakfast when so many of my brothers and sisters, far better than I in every sense, do not know where their next breakfast is coming from?

Should I not look these sad facts in the face? To recognize these pitiable conditions does not make me less strenuous for human emancipation.—
James G. Townsend in Sunday School Times.

Couldn't Escape, Poor Girl.
"Won't you sing something?" he asked when they were alone together.

"Please excuse me," she replied. "I don't feel like singing this evening. I would much rather sit here and have you talk to me. Tell me about yourself."

"There's nothing interesting to say about me. I have not had an exciting career."

"But I should like to hear about your work, your ideals and all that, you know."

"Why do you care what my ideals are?"

"I am always interested in every man's ideals. Men are so interesting.
They always have some aim in life aside from marriage. Girls generally think only of that. It seems so silly and uninteresting."

"Marriage?"

"Yes."

"Haven't you ever thought of getting married?"

"O, if you insist on dragging in the subject I suppose I may as well give in."

Placing the Blame.

Congressman Jacob A. Canter of New York smiled when the topic turned to the servant girl. He said he was reminded of an incident that happened in the home of Smith, who lives up around Syracuse. In the kitchen of that home there is a servant girl named Nora. When the earthquake tickled its way through Syracuse a week or so ago, Mrs.
Smith was reclining in the sitting-room on the second floor.

Hearing glass breaking, furniture rocking and crockeryware cracking, she sprang to her feet and hastened to the head of the stair.

"Nora! Nora!" exclaimed the good woman in an anxious voice.
"What in the world are you doing now?"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Preserving Game for Citizens.

The Supreme court of the United States has upheld the constitutionality of the laws of Pennsylvania prohibiting unnaturalized foreign born residents from killing any wild birds or animals except in defense of his person and property, and to that end making it unlawful for any such person to own a shotgun or rifle. The court holds that this law does not amount to a denial of equal protection of the laws and that the rights of Italian citizens are not infringed.
The court ruled that a state may preserve its wild game for its own citizens in any way that it pleases.

Might Help in Other Cities.

With the object of overcoming the shock and noise which invariably results when a heavy trolley car passes over the intersection of two tracks, Dr. C. F. Kelly, a Philadelphia dentist, has recently patented an improvement in these crossings. The innovation consists of four pins mounted at each of the four track intersections, and as the car approaches these pins are automatically swung around so as to bring the opening in the tracks for the passage of the car. The same operation is performed for cars coming from the other direction.

LOOK FOR CENSUS FIGURES

Country Would Welcome Reliable Information as to the Extent of the Electrical Industries.

An effort will soon be made to secure some authoritative figures on the extent of the electrical industries of this country, which are eagerly desired by those who are interested in this line. The last government reports on this subject are dated 1907, and there have been gigantic strides since then. It has been estimated that the investment in central station industry is capitalized at more than two billion dollars, the earnings of which are computed to be $350,000,000. The central station income is about four hundred million dollars. Some other interesting figures are: Value of electrical apparatus made, $350,000,000;
electric railway earnings, $635,000, 000; central station earnings, $450,
000,000; telephone earnings, $350,
000,000; telegraph earnings, $85,
000,000; isolated plant service, $125,000,000; miscellaneous electric service, $125,000,000, making a grand total of approximately $2, 120,000,000.

Snake Killed at Lexington, Ky., Believed to Have Mistaken the Object for an Egg.

Oscar Dennis, a tenant on the farm of Grant Workman, while plowing yesterday, discovered a young turkey, under which his wife had placed a setting of eggs, in mortal combat with an immense black-snake.

The snake had coiled itself around the turkey, and was in the act of crushing it, when Dennis came to the rescue and killed the snake.

After death he cut the snake open and discovered a white doorknob in its stomach. The snake measured seven feet from head to tip of tail.
It is thought that the reptile had swallowed the knob thinking it was an egg.—Lexington (Ky.) dispatch

"Just what do you have to do, anyway?"

"Why is it that you don't get through at the same time every night?"

"Do you mean to tell me you have to work on a holiday? Now why on earth should that be?"

"How soon do you get a raise?"

What, no regular time for giving raises? I thought they always did that by schedule."

"Wouldn't you rather do some-

MEN IN MIND IN HOPKINSVILLE

People of Prominence In The Pearl City of The Penny-royal.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH NO. 50.

Elmer Coates, Young Druggist, Who Has Made Good In Hopkinsville.

R. E. Coates, Secretary and Treasurer of the Anderson-Fowler Drug Co., was born near Dawson Springs, in Hopkins county, Ky., in 1881, and came to Hopkinsville when 19 years of age to become a clerk in the drug store of Anderson & Fowler, in Hotel Latham. He was a quiet, unassuming youth, with ambition, industry and a knack for doing whatever he did thoroughly, faithfully and successfully. He set to work to learn the drug business and as the years rolled by he mastered every detail of the business and in ten years owned a drug store of his own. He became an experienced pharmacist and in due time qualified himself for handling even the prescription department of his business.

He moved with the Anderson-Fowler Drug Co. to its Main Street store, and in 1910 bought out the Hardwick Drug Store and in the same year incorporated the Coates Drug Co. About a year ago the Company of which he was the head acquired an interest in the Anderson-Fowler Co., and the two stores were consolidated, and Mr. Coates became part owner of the store in which he made his start, fourteen years ago. By dint of hard work and close attention to his work, he has risen step by step to a position of commanding importance in the commercial life of the city. He is associated in the management of the business with Alex. C. Overshiner and Leonard E. Fowler, and they make a trio of popular young business men, whose store is one of the most frequented rendezvous in the city.

In addition to handling everything in the drug line, the store is the principal news agency of the city and operates an up-to-date refreshment parlor that is a popular feature. Mr. Coates is a son-in-law of Mr. Geo. C. Long, President of the First National Bank, and is an influential member of the Christian church.

Base Ball via Censorless.

Eclipse Park, Aug. 31 (5:55 p. m., delayed in transmission.)—The following official statement was issued by the War Office this evening:

"The situation in general is actually as follows:

"Against Minneapolis and Kansas City our forces, which assumed the offensive, succeeded in driving the enemy across the frontiers. The Germans (from Milwaukee) then assumed the offensive and, in a battle along our entire front of eleven innings, have succeeded this afternoon in forcing our right wing under Gen. Toney, to retire to our first line of defense, which is strongly held.

"The brave English, under Gen. Sir Field Marshal Ingerton, were too weak in artillery to hold the position assigned and are now or should be on the bench.

"The much feared field guns of the Germans did not succeed in getting the range until the very close of the action, when a thirteen-inch shell from the Beall battery struck the General Staff between wind and water.

"During the course of the engagement a number of Zeppelins and aeroplanes were observed over our lines, but, without exception, their bombs failed to explode, the troops under Gens. Osborn, Burch and Calahan catching them in their bare hands.

"The German frontal attack was delivered in close order and their infantry through the whole of ten innings were mowed down relentlessly, but fresh troops were always ready to take their places.

"Our movement in falling back is purely strategic.

"Our second and third lines are even more strongly held than the first. Should these lines be taken, we are prepared to stand aside, our main army falling back on Columbus or Cleveland, where it will be prepared to threaten the enemy's line of communication.

"All of the first year men under Gens. Crossin and Taylor have been called to the colors and Gen. Clemens, in command of the reservists, is reported to be within one day's march.

"Our brave allies at Indianapolis are everywhere driving the enemy before them.

"As yet our army, notwithstanding an incontestable check, remains intact. The morale of our troops is excellent.

"Gen. Loudermilk, who has so conspicuously retrieved the earlier reverses in St. Paul, has just come up and will be assigned to the center."—Louisville Times.

EXPLORER SEDOFF DEAD IN ARCTICS

Sacrifices Life In Vain Effort to Reach North Pole—The Survivors.

London, Sept. 2.—A St. Petersburg dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Company reports that surviving members of the Arctic expedition, headed by Lieut. Sedoff, which left for the North in 1912, have arrived at Archangel.

The survivors stated that Lieut. Sedoff died in a vain attempt to reach the North pole. The expedition wintered in 1912 and 1913 in newly discovered territory and later Sedoff proceeded to Frantz Josef Land, whence he started for the pole, accompanied by two sailors. The leader fell ill on the way and died.

AT THE PRINCESS.

Broadway Star Feature Vitagraph Picture Today.

"Captain Alvarez" is a six part Broadway Star Feature Vitagraph picture that is creating unusual interest all over the country because of its remarkable resemblance to the present conditions in Mexico, and whose story might have been taken from a page in the history of any of the South American Republics. War is the key-note of the thrilling story, with love and intrigue playing close seconds. Robt. Wainwright, an American, goes to Argentina, to look after his father's business and becomes so disgusted at the conditions under the rule of President Rosas, the tyrant, in power, joins forces with the Rebels, and by his deeds of action and daring, under the name of Captain Alvarez, materially assists in the downfall of the much hated ruler. Thrills and action abound throughout the picture relieved by bits of love-making that warm the heart and gives the right touch of sentiment. "Captain Alvarez" will be the big feature picture at the Princess today.

FREE MARKETS IN NEW YORK OPEN

New York, September 2.—Four experimental free markets with accommodations for 500 push-carts or stands and 112 farm wagons were thrown open to the public in New York Tuesday. The success or failure of this plan to reduce the high cost of food, according to its promoters, depends upon the spirit of the purchasing public.

To Fall Back On.

Someone predict that by this time next year a pineapple will sell for $1, thanks to the war. Maybe, but if it does, we shall try to make out with the Ben Davis apple, which even war couldn't make worth more than five cents.—State Journal.

Home Coming at B. F. C.

A great "Home Coming" is being planned to take place at Bethel Female College, Hopkinsville, Ky., on Wednesday, September 30th, 1914. At this time every woman ever enrolled at the College is earnestly requested and urged to be present. During the past sixty odd years many women have had their training at Bethel and it is hoped that there will be many representatives present from all of the classes, and in addition to this, that there will be a large number of those who have attended the college from time to time during all the years who did not graduate. The local members of the Alumnae Association have the matter in charge, and they are arranging a delightful program.

It is requested that every one expecting to attend the Home Coming will notify that Committee at the earliest possible moment, not later than the twentieth. Entertainment will be furnished all those who attend. No formal invitations will be sent out. If you have ever attended Bethel Female College, this is meant as a special, personal invitation to you. Make your plans at once to be present. You will meet old friends and classmates, and a hearty welcome awaits you. Special rates on the R. R. may be secured, on account of the Pennyroyal Fair which will be in progress at that time. Address any member of the Committee at Hopkinsville, Ky.

Two Dogs Kill 200 Sheep.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside George M. Rommel of the United States Department of Agriculture is quoted as follows: "Our dogs are almost as great a hindrance to the sheep industry as parasites. The only protection against them is watchfulness by day and a dog-proof enclosure at night. In Michigan recently 200 sheep were all run to death by two curs. Dog-tight night folds can be built of woven wire at small expense."

Frank James, the former bandit, is now living on a ranch at Edgewood, Wash. He is now 70 years old and has been a good citizen for 30 years.

SUITS OVER SALARIES

Action Begun by Taxpayers To Make Officials Pay Back Raises in Own Salaries.

G. W. Lantrip and 20 other taxpayers of Hopkins county have brought suit against five county officials to recover salaries paid on salary increases. G. W. Syper, county attorney, is sued for $1,200; R. B. Bradley, county Judge, for $1,400; A. J. Fox, School Supt., for $1,844.40; Will T. Mills, County Clerk, $1,889.91 and J. B. Stanley, Sheriff, for $1,468.24. The allegation is made that the salaries were changed in 1910, after they had been fixed for the terms in 1909.

CHIEF CITY

Henderson, Shelbyville, Middlesboro, Paris, Carrollton, M. Sterling, Burlington, Winchester, Maysville, Lexington, Georgetown, Lawrenceburg.

Elections will be held in the remaining eight counties later in the fall. They are Jefferson, county, Louisville; Kenton, Covington; Nelson, Bardstown; Marion, Lebanon; Franklin, Frankfort; Meade, Brandenburg; Campbell, Newport; Boyd, Ashland. When the campaign is finally over it is believed that all but three or four counties in the State will be dry.—Bowling Green News.

CLARK'S Big Department Grocery

Hopkinsville, Ky., Main Street.

There was never a time since we have been in our big store that we were as fully prepared to cater to the wants of all the people. We bought at the commencement of the war in the European countries large quantities of flour, meat, lard, sugar, coffee, white beans, canned syrups and heavy goods of all kinds. Since our purchases have been made the prices have advanced very much. We are in position to figure with you on your supplies.

42 cases of china, cut glass, toys, dolls, books and aluminumware all different lines from European countries are now in. All of our import orders are in. We will have the most complete line of any city in Kentucky.

SCHOOL BOOKS

You all realize what a hard time we have had in gathering all of them, but have succeeded in supplying not only our own county but the adjoining counties have asked us to help them out. We believe the people generally appreciate our efforts to supply them school supplies. We have splendid line tablets, satchels, bags, baskets, pencils, pens, ink, etc.

We want your business, the more goods we sell the cheaper we can sell them.

It worth something to you to have a big department store in your county seat.

Let Us Have a Share of Your Business. We appreciate it.
